FAIR AND CONFERENCE ADVERTISING!

The special railroad rates given to all visitors to the Territorial Fair and the Mormon Church Conference will bring thousands of people to Salt Lake from Oct. 1 to 10. A great proportion of these visitors are readers of THE SEMI-WEEKLY HERALD at their homes in Utah, Idaho, Wyoming, Arizona and Colorado. All will be levied to call at THE HERALD counting rooms for free copies of the paper during their stay in the city, and advertisers who desire to reach this big army of new customers can best do so by patronizing the columns of THE SEMI-WEEKLY HERALD before the Fair and Conference, and the DAILY HERALD during that period. Special rates accorded present advertisers. If you have not time to make up your advertisement, ring up Telephone 837 and an advertising agent will promptly call on you and lead you his aid.

ALLEN GIVES IT UP.

He Will Not Be a Candidate for County Clerk.

There is Something About Liberal Politics that Depresses and Demoralizes.

Mayor Scott did not all half his term until he was heartily ashamed of himself and his party. He could not have been induced to take the office for another term for half the town. Life was a burden to him, and he sickened over with age and shrivelled up with care.

Mayor Baikin grew gray in one night, and his hair turned white in a month, and it is his neck and back to which he is now turned, and he is now a man of half the town. Life was a burden to him, and he sickened over with age and shrivelled up with care.

Both would like to play a game at "quits."

So much for the mayors.

City Clerk Hyams had occasion to quit very early in his career. Police Judge Laing, who was the Chief of Police, was disgusted or disgraced—part of both—and has left the party and city in disgust. Ditto Jaeney in a brief and professional career.

The only man left in the city hall after the first sample of Liberal administration to fill out their terms was City Treasurer J. B. Walden and Assessor E. H. Cline.

Walden became an honest Democrat, and everybody knows what became of Cline. And turn to the county court.

Two out of the three judges have resigned for reasons best known to themselves.

And what of the leaders?

The brilliant, dashing Harry McCallum, the only ward politician with a genius worthy of Tammany hall, after pondering well over the warning words of rebuke that Judge Zane delivered in the Allen case, cut down from the silly, corrupt state, stripped off his garments and cleansed himself with a short service under Marshal Parsons as a penitentiary guard. He is now a clean, upright, honest-looking attorney at law, doing a legitimate business and gaining the respect of his friends.

Judge Powers, after returning from outside of the Chicago convention, gave it out that he would give up politics and return to his profession. But Powers is weak in his make-up and what he says today may not be tomorrow. The poet may not have drawn the perfect line when he said: "The best of us are lost." Powers has gone below the bottom in politics and there is no telling where he'll land.

Varian and Van Horn repeated before it was too late.

But the last man to give the Liberal party any character was C. E. Allen, and now it comes out that he is going to quit politics and lead a changed life. He is weary of the weight put upon him. To redeem himself he has been spending his nights at home reading law and is going to try to lead an honest life—away from the mud-sucking crowd.

DR. LUFF'S STATEMENT.

He Bows His Head to the Consequences of Error.

At the close of the morning services in Dr. Luff's church last Sunday, that reverend gentleman read the following statement to his church and congregation and to the public:

"It is already known to the public that early in September I asked President Elder J. D. Gilliland to call my brother ministers of the Methodist Episcopal church in Utah together, and proposed to them to take any action that they might deem desirable in order to prevent or curtail any harm that might otherwise come to the church, or the cause of religion and morality in the state, and to the cause of the open publication of charges affecting my standing as a minister. It is also known that my brethren unanimously resolved that no public statement at present was necessary or desirable, and resolving that no mention be made of the matter outside of ourselves. Now that all has been said by way of accusation and counter accusation, and that I have used my use of portions of addresses by Dr. Guard, and now that all the harm has been done that can be done by my own reputation, and to the cause of religion and morality by this publication, my sense of honor and duty suggest that I must speak, notwithstanding the advice of some of my most trusted friends, that no good can come of further statement. I wish to perform all my duty toward my God, my church and my fellow man. I do not now write this to palliate or deny my use of the language, but to state the facts, and to leave it to the conscience of the public to decide. I am willing to suffer all the penalty that may come to me personally, in the form of charges and mortification, and the loss of privilege or position, but I do not desire, therefore, to lay upon the door of any who may accuse or censure me, nor do I make any appeal for lenient judgment on the ground of my past life and conduct. To the consequences of error I humbly bow my head."

"But having submitted the above statement, or—if the public chooses so to call it—confession, it is too much to ask of the good people of this city and territory to grant me charity for past offenses, and sufficient probation in the future to enable me to do my duty by my life and my deeds that I still merit their confidence."

"T. C. LUFF."

HIS FIRST CANVAS.

Thomas Sleight, the Artist Shoemaker, Paints Lake Blanche.

The old saying that artists are born, not made, receives another verification in the first oil painting from the brush of Thomas Sleight, a Utah boy.

A large canvas, filling the entire width of the plate glass window in Marcellus Bros' book store, was placed on exhibition yesterday morning. Last evening the picture attracted the street pedestrians and at once commanded the eye of all connoisseurs of art. The fidelity of the work naturally caused a curiosity to know the artist, but the author had not even left his name. On inquiring in the book store all the information to be had was that the painting had been left there by a young shoemaker who did not want his name known until the pub-
